WHEELING, JUNE 25, 1890.

The City's Opportunity.

Wheeling is facing an important crisis in her history. In the march of progress she has reached a point where she can not stand still. She must go forward, or fall back. It is a time for action.

For many years there has been in the minds of public-spirited men an idea of a great city with all the equipments of a advocated a union railroad station. But all these plans fell flat, and the community had settled down to the convicwere visionary dreams. The town rolled cordially welcome him home after his sleepily on in the old rut, till one day she was joited out with a suddenness that aroused her thoroughly. Practical men offered to build the belt railroad, and they have done it. Compared to was realized.

When the same men proposed to give to the city what her people had for years longed for in an impracticable way, there was reason for rejoicing Union railway station would be built, and the work already done by its prowould be a credit as well as a convergent hands. nience to the place.

a necessity. Thirteen thousand dollars would not pay one-third of the cost of the wall alone. Where can that sum be better expended than in securing so vast an improvement?

The work contemplated by the company in connection with the union station involved an xpenditure of over $325,000 — considerably more than the public would contribute were it to give this $13,000. Is it wise to stop that expenditure for it wises to stop the form of the following: Mr. C. H. Morris, Newark, Ark, says: "Was down with a baces of lungs, and friends and the following: Mr. C. H. following remarkable sentences, which do not seem to agree with each other:

"We come to protest in the name of the common people, who, by the bill, will be compelled to pay an increase of duty. If this bill goes into operation a great many importers will have to retire from business."

Mr. Constable did not inform the Senate Committee, and it was an oversight in them not to ask him, why importers should "retire from business" if "the common people are compelled to pay an increase of duty." The two propositions are antagonistic. At the same time Mr. Isider Straus declared that "It is a mistake to suppose that they (the importers) object to Tariff duties. The larger the gross cost of the goods the greater their profit, for they charge their percentage of profit on the Tarift as well as on the original cost." Now, it is just a little strange that, if the McKinley bill proposes to increase the profits of the importers, he should go before the Senate committee and protest against its passage, and some of them argue that it would force importers to retire from business.

Speaking upon the same subject, a contemporary propounds the following:
Will it be a great disadvantage to the country
